* Applicants are strongly encouraged to contact faculty members in the program before submitting an application. Generally, after approval by the admissions committee, applicants are admitted directly into a faculty member's lab. Students are only directly admitted to the MS program if they have a mentor pre-arranged. Contact the program with questions.

PREPARATORY COURSEWORK

Candidates for graduate study in nutrition and metabolism should have a strong background in mathematics, chemistry, biological sciences, medical sciences, or social sciences.

Specific prerequisites for the graduate program include the following:

- 2 semesters of general chemistry
- 2 semesters of biological sciences
- 1 semester of organic chemistry
- Biochemistry with an organic chemistry prerequisite

- 1 semester of statistics or calculus
- 1 semester of physiology

Applicants who have not completed all the requirements may be admitted, but deficiencies should be made up during the first year of graduate study.

All applicants must have a minimum grade point average of at least 3.0 (on a 4.0 scale), as well as three references, and a personal statement. Acceptance requires approval by the Department of Nutritional Sciences and the Graduate School.

Applicants interested in the PhD degree should apply directly to the program. A master's degree is not required for entry.
